

The Threat That Won't Rest

Almost every creature on Earth needs sleep — but not termites. These relentless wrecking crews continue chewing, tunneling, and destroying 24 hours a day.

Once they find a food source termite infestations can spread for years without any visible evidence, often reaching extensive proportions before anyone realizes the damage has been done.”

Even homes with block walls and metal studs aren't safe, as trussing, wood trim, and other wooden components can be prime targets for a subterranean termite colony.
